See this tweet from Mayor Tory. The point is clear - Toronto and many other cities handled this MUNICIPAL policing problem in a professional and competent manner.

Granted the volume of the protest in Ottawa was greater and came without as much warning, but the City of Ottawa and the OPS have proven themselves incapable of grappling with this problem. And it is now the duty of the responsible senior authority - i.e., the Public Safety Minister of ONTARIO under PROVINCIAL policing legislation - to rectify that problem, including talking control, if and as necessary.

There should not be an unconstitutional leap to pin this on the feds or the RCMP.

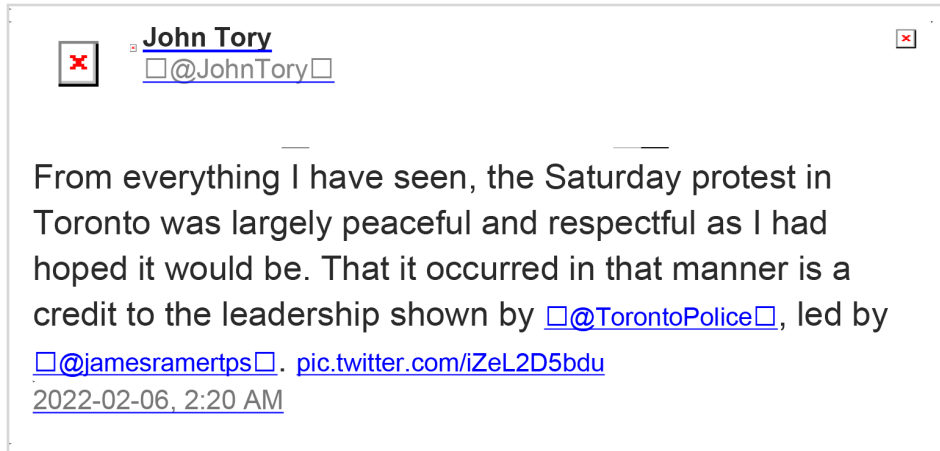

Federally under mutual assistance agreements we can/should provide resources and personnel, as requested, but the authority and responsibility rests with the municipality and the province. To this point, they have failed to deliver safety and security to the inhabitants of Ottawa (and those innocent inhabitants include many parts of the Government of Canada).

It remains essential to delve deeply into the true genesis of this demonstration and who is controlling and directing it. Stefanie Carvin suggests it is the work of organized Violent Right Wing Extremists. It may even have US roots. She could be correct. Our intelligence and national security experts must absolutely get to the bottom of this horrific set of events. And prepare for the next one.
